What sea otters do

CARMEL ARTIST Ralph W. Cooke III has illustrated a book for children that describes our frolicking friends on the coast — the sea otters. Written with a state college professor, the book depicts the sea otters' habitat, what they eat and how they train their young. Parts of the book are reprinted on pages eight and nine.

Happy ending to truck wreck and blood drive it imperiled

The driver of a Red Cross bloodmobile, en route from San Jose to a blood drive at the Carmel Holiday Inn, took a wrong turn Friday, lost his brakes and crashed 90 feet down Ocean Avenue into a brick wall.

Both the driver, Tom Cox, 20, of San Jose, and a passenger, nurse Hazel Fowle, also from San Jose, escaped injury. The truck suffered "moderate" damage, a spokesman for the California Highway Patrol said.

Officials of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Red Cross chapter delayed their pre-Christmas blood drive for 90 minutes while a second truck was dispatched from Central California Red Cross headquarters in San Jose. The trucks haul medical devices used at blood drives and the personnel in San Jose feared they might have been harmed in the crash, said Jean D. Snow, speaking for the local chapter.

Despite the accident and delay, the drive netted 103 pints of blood. "The turnout was real good," Mrs. Snow said.

Cox was driving southbound on Highway 1 when he apparently became confused, Mrs. Snow said. "The map said there was a stop light at Ocean Avenue and to continue on. He must have thought he should go down Ocean," she said. The Carmel Holiday Inn is on Rio Road, which crosses Highway 1 about 1.5 miles farther south. The accident occurred at 8:40 a.m. Blood collections were scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

The brakes on the truck failed because of an apparent leak in the hydraulic system, Mrs. Snow said. The truck finally came to rest at 3507 Ocean Ave., the home of T. C. Han.

Red Cross officials organized the blood drive to replenish supplies depleted by heavy use during the holidays. Mrs. Snow said the rise in auto accidents during the Christmas season puts a drain on blood supplies in the region.

Councilmen could be statesmen

"Laws are like cobwebs, which may catch small flies, but let wasps and hornets break through" — Jonathan Swift

By AL EISNER

THE CARMEL City Council can act in a statesmanlike manner Tuesday night by failing to adopt the second reading of an ordinance that would ban any new restaurants in the commercial district.

On a split vote, the council adopted the first reading of an ordinance this month that would require any new restaurant to provide one parking space for every four seats, or to pay an in-lieu fee of $13,750 for every space it cannot provide. Since there are virtually no parcels left on which to construct parking lots, it would not create more parking spaces, but would result in the levying of confiscatory fees on any would-be restaurant owner willing to pay up.

If, for example, a young couple wished to fulfill their dream of opening a small 16-seat restaurant in Carmel, they would have to pay the city $67,000 for the parking spaces they could not provide.

(They could, of course, try to buy an existing restaurant, but would probably not be able to afford it. The value of all existing restaurants will have ballooned to unrealistic values because they have, in effect, a license to operate.)

THE ORDINANCE has provoked strong opposition from many who feel the council is interfering with the free enterprise system. Our own city attorney pointed out that the law may be unconstitutional because it discriminates against one type of business.

Councilman David Hughes, who is strongly opposed to the proposed law, wrote a blistering criticism of the ordinance which appeared on this page last week. And now, the respected voice of the Carmel Citizens Committee has been added to the rising crescendo of criticism.

Long-time Carmel resident William Doolittle, writing for the board of directors of the Citizens Committee, says in a letter in today's edition: "... prices of meals would most likely rise faster than normal and restaurants would become complacent in terms of both service and cuisine."

Is this in the best interests of the residents of Carmel?

As justification for the ordinance, Mayor Gunnar Norberg has repeatedly pointed out that there are as many restaurant seats in Carmel as there are residents. This seems like a startling statistic. Surely that is too many restaurants for this little village, and surely they create horrible traffic problems. Don't they?

We share the opinion of others that the parking restriction is a red herring concocted to justify banning any new restaurants. Carmel is a walking town. Residents and visitors alike walk to the place they choose for lunch. By the time dinner rolls around, the streets have usually been emptied of the hated cars and diners can usually find ample parking near the restaurant of their choice.

Comparing Carmel to a place like Los Angeles (when "statewide" statistics are quoted indicating that cities require so many parking spaces per seat) is misleading. Anyone who has ever visited Los Angeles knows that you absolutely must use your car to get to your lunch spot unless you work in the congested downtown areas.

THE PROPOSED ordinance is a classic case of overkill. How did it all start? In November 1976, the council pondered the wisdom of issuing a use permit to a new restaurant (the Fabulous Toots Lagoon) that wanted to serve hard liquor. Alarmed over the profusion of restaurants serving liquor, the city fathers reluctantly gave in on the specific question, but voted a moratorium on new restaurant construction until they could study the matter. The planning commission was instructed to research the question, come up with findings and make recommendations.

Instead of an ordinance that would restrict the issuance of any further hard liquor licenses in Carmel, we have a proposed law that effectively chokes off the building of any new restaurants — whether or not they plan to serve booze.

By artificially restricting the number of restaurants that can be allowed to do business in Carmel, the city would be upsetting the balance of supply and demand, and provide a windfall to restaurant owners in business before the passage of the legislation. It wouldn't be very long before landlords would recognize the increase in value and escalate rent structures. The result would be higher prices for food.

MOTELS IN CARMEL sell for seven times their gross. That is, a 20-unit inn that charges $30 per day and grosses, say, $200,000 per year now sells for $1.2 million. A similar motel in Monterey that grosses the same amount of money might sell for only three or four times its gross (not net, but gross). Why is this true? Well, at least partly because the City Council adopted some highly restrictive laws about 15 years ago to stop the proliferation of new motels in town. One of the instruments used was highly restrictive parking requirements.

We are not quibbling with the actions of past City Councils. There are some people who think we have too many motels, others who think we need more.

The net effect of the proposed law on restaurant parking would be to send restaurant and food prices upward.

The proposal has caused deep division in our village. There is doubt as to its constitutionality. It would undoubtedly raise the price of food served in Carmel restaurants. It would not create any new parking facilities in the business district. There is no proof — direct or indirect — that restaurants contribute to parking problems.

Until the matter is studied more carefully, it would be prudent for those in charge of the destiny of our city to either delay action or kill the ill-conceived ordinance.

IT WOULD BE oh-so-easy for supporters of the ordinance to point out that the writer of this column is also the publisher of the Monterey Peninsula Review, a tabloid distributed chiefly in motels for out-of-towners. The Review derives a great deal of income from restaurants wishing to reach the thriving tourist market.

It would seem logical therefore, that we would want to encourage the construction of a limitless number of restaurants in our little village.

Right? Wrong.

The construction in recent years of additional restaurants has resulted in the closing of several that were not able to withstand the competition. There are some others that are experiencing severe financial problems caused by the onset of tough competition. The result is that there will be fewer — not more — restaurants in Carmel within the next three to four months because of the stresses of the marketplace, and not because of any legislation.

Computer exec becomes fifth council candidate

A fifth candidate emerged Tuesday for the upcoming Carmel City Council race. James L. Jenkins, 39, owner of a data processing firm in Monterey, took nomination papers from City Hall and said he would seek a four-year term.

Three seats on the council will be filled in the March election. Two of them carry four-year terms. One carries a two-year term.

Helen Arnold, the incumbent in the race for the two-year post, has taken out papers but she has not returned them. If she does not meet the filing deadline of noon today, the deadline will be extended for others until Tuesday at noon. So far, only one person has filed in the two-year race. He is Francis H. Herrick, 67, a retired professor.

In the race for the pair of four-year council seats, only one candidate has filed papers, thus assuring a place on the ballot. He is Howard Brunn, a businessman active in the Old Carmel residents' lobby.

The two seats have been occupied by Mike Brown and Bernard Anderson. Anderson has announced he will not seek reelection. Brown, however, picked up his nomination papers on Tuesday.

Jenkins, the newest candidate, has lived in Carmel for four years. He and his wife, Mary, have two sons — Frankie, 8, and Barry, 11. Jenkins is the president of Cypress Computer Corp., a data processing firm.

The race for the two-year seat stems from the appointment of Mrs. Arnold in September 1976. She was appointed to fill the unexpired term of resigning councilman Eugene Hammond until the next municipal election.

Top vote getters in the separate races for two- and four-year terms are those elected under city election rules.

Council misguided

Dear Editor:

The board members of the Carmel Citizens Committee are concerned about a recent decision of the Carmel City Council.

While the vast majority of the residents of Carmel are opposed to any further expansion of the commercial district, any laws or regulations designed to control potential growth should be implemented in a uniform and fair manner. This is not the case with respect to the council's decision to propose an ordinance which would require new restaurants to provide either one off-street parking space for each four seats in a facility or a one-time in-lieu-of-parking fee of $13,750 for each parking space required.

We sympathize with the council's desire to control the growth of our town, but this recent action, if enacted, could cause some regrettable consequences in the future. As City Attorney George Brehmer pointed out at the Dec. 5 council meeting, there is some question about the constitutionality of such an ordinance which would regulate new restaurants through off-street parking requirements, while ignoring other types of businesses that also contribute to the parking problem. We would hate to see the city become involved in potential legal problems over this proposed ordinance in the future.

The total number of restaurants appears to be attaining a saturation point based upon the recent closing of a few places and the financial condition of some other eating establishments. The basic law of supply and demand will ultimately determine the number of restaurants within the existing boundaries of the business district. In basically a free enterprise system, the better quality places will survive and the poorer quality eating places will be forced to close over a period of time. On the other hand, by fixing or limiting the number of restaurants to existing locations, this ordinance would tend to reduce desirable competition and perpetuate eating places based mainly upon financial strength as opposed to culinary quality. In addition, prices of meals would most likely rise faster than normal and restaurants would become complacent in terms of both service and cuisine.

We, therefore, hope that the members of the City Council will vote not to establish this ordinance at its second reading Jan. 3.

Balzer files his report on wine festival in Monterey

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

VINTAGE '77, the California Wine Festival, was conducted the first week in December on the Monterey Peninsula to a sold-out audience. And, I am pleased to report, the prevailing mood, the wines and the forecast for the coming year all were good.

At the concluding champagne brunch, Jack Davies of the celebrated Schramsberg Vineyards and Cellars held his listeners in this mood of optimism, eschewing all the gloom and doom of certain newspaper headlines. "I don't believe," he said, "there is anywhere in the world with the vigor and enthusiasm that exists here in California for our wine industry." He cited a remarkable fact: of the 64 wineries participating in the festival, 34 did not even exist in 1965 when he and his wife Jamie started the renaissance of the old Schramsberg winery in the hills of Calistoga.

Davies, an MBA from Harvard and an executive from a thriving steel firm, went on to achieve the impossible. In one generation, he created a thriving, world-famous champagne house. Topping off his own success, Davies cited the deluxe champagne market of the moment, which is giving effervescent support to fellow champagne makers: Chateau St. Jean, Mirassou, Sonoma Vineyards, Domaine Chandon — all new to the field of methode champenoise bubbly. Hanns Kornell has prizes from Europe for his Sehr Trocken. Almaden has two new sparkling wines, Chardonnay Nature and Eye of the Partridge. Paul Masson is giving a January debut to a Johannisberg Riesling Champagne.

ENOLOGISTS Andre Tchelistcheff and Professor A. Dinsmoor Webb, chairman of the department of viticulture and enology of UC Davis, are in total accord. Through our technological know-how, they say, we've arrived in California at the bonanza of a new Golden Age of wines. Tchelistcheff cited the Gallo French Colombard and Sauvignon Blanc, cork-finished varietal wines at retail prices ($1.69) his colleagues in France agreed would be "impossible" in that country.

Michael Mondavi, son of Robert Mondavi of Oakville, working as a winemaker with his father since the inception of their Napa Valley winery in 1966, posed a question rhetorically. "How can you compare wines of California with those of France?" The answer came quickly. "There are different soils, different vines." In his six points of fine wine production — climate, soil, grape, facilities, knowledge and desire to produce fine wine — California winemakers have all elements in optimum condition.

At the opening reception on the Sunday preceding the seminars, all 64 wineries presented one wine to the arriving festival guests.

THE FOLLOWING wines were highlights among those offered and stand as available evidence to young Mondavi's assertion that these good California wines belong in the upper echelons of table wine aristocracy:

- 1976 Simi Alexander Valley Gewurztraminer—$4.49. Opulently aromatic, sweet-edged, superb wine.

- 1975 Hoffman Mountain Ranch Chardonnay—$8.50. Beautifully balanced blending of oak and grape.

- 1974 Clos du Val Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon—$9. Soft as velvet, superbly rich claret.

- 1974 Chappellet Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon—$8. To lay away. Big bouquet of Merlot plus Cab.

- 1974 Cuvaion Napa Valley Zinfandel—$5.50. Berry rich in Winemaster Togni's fine style.

- 1975 Enz Vineyards San Benito Zinfandel—$3.50. Extraordinary value. Good gutsy wine.

Anglers get year end reminder

Starting Sunday, sport fishermen will need 1978 licenses, which are now on sale at Department of Fish and Game offices and with license agents on the Monterey Peninsula.

Fees are $4 for a resident license, $2 for an inland waters validation stamp and $3 for a trout and salmon stamp. Cost for the three-day ocean fishing license is $2.

Also beginning Sunday, the fee for the duck stamp will be $5. However, 1977-78 duck stamps for which hunters paid $1 prior to the first of the year still will be valid for use during the current waterfowl season, the department said last week.

Habitat

Often sea otters live alone.

Baby sea otters, called pups, are born in the winter of the year. The mother takes care of the pup, cleaning and nursing it.

Pups are born in the sea.

This is because most sea otters stay in the water all their lives.

Rarely do California sea otters come onto the land.

The pup cannot swim at all and must rest its chest of its mother. When she dives for food, she puts the pup on the surface of the water.

Restaurant clears remodeling hurdle

IT WAS SOMETHING shy of a demolition derby. But an argument over the word "demolition" at a Dec. 21 Carmel Planning Commission meeting nearly wheeled a proposed seafood restaurant out of a $98,000 remodeling and demolition plan.

Instead, the commission granted the improvements, but at the same time requested an official definition of "demolition" from the city staff.

The commissioners voted 6-1 to approve a request by Green Meadows Inc. to perform extensive remodeling at the current Pump House restaurant at Sixth and Junipero. Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson dissented.

Green Meadows Inc. has proposed to convert the restaurant into a seafood lunch and dinner restaurant to be called the "Fish House on the Park."

THE COMMISSIONERS agreed with the concept of the restaurant. Two of them even said they liked it. But Commissioner Davidson asked why restroom demolition costs exceeding $21,000 were not included in total remodeling costs.

City Planning Director Bob Griggs said demolition was entirely different from remodeling.

Chairman Dorothea Roberts answered that part of the costs were defrayed because the restroom changes would eliminate a non-conformity by supplying access to handicapped.

Commissioner Robert Stephenson explained that the word demolition is used differently in the trade than in a dictionary. Demolition is usually not considered remodeling, he said.

"This demolition is not demolition at all," answered Davidson. "It is remodeling."

Under city code, a building may not be remodeled for more than 25 per cent of its assessed value. The limit applies for one year.

Green Meadows Inc. fell $200 under that limit when it listed $61,558 in exterior and interior remodeling.

The firm also informed the commission that it planned to spend an additional $36,750 on rest room demolition and repair.

DAVIDSON SAID the commission could not exclude the demolition costs from the remodeling costs. He suggested requiring that Green Meadows apply for a use permit to do the additional remodeling.

Not possible, answered City Attorney George Brehmer. He said the city code makes no provisions for issuing such a use permit.

"It was intended for you to have that power," the city attorney explained, but it is not spelled out in the city code.

Commissioner Davidson stood by the 25 per cent remodeling limit. "The intent of the ordinance is to avoid radical changes in the village character," Davidson said.

Brehmer informed the commission he is currently working with the City Hall staff on a provision that would allow use permits for building remodeling projects that cost more than 25 per cent.

Oakland Ballet 'Nutcracker' was better in 1976

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THE OAKLAND Ballet did The Nutcracker at King Hall on Tuesday. The production was quite different from this company's last visit here. There were many distinctive arrangements by choreographer Ronn Guidi and a fine performance by the Oakland troupe. The afternoon audience, at least half of it children, nearly filled the hall. I was reminded of the song Little Girls from the new musical Annie. King Hall was inundated with little girls on that traditional pilgrimage to Tchaikovsky's beautiful ballet.

The performance began a half hour late in the afternoon on a rainy and humid day. Several numbers were omitted in order to shorten the performance time, but with no detriment to the overall success of the production. The music was recorded, the costumes were fine but not exceptional. The choreography was a mix of traditional materials with some stylish and original elements and sequences. But the grand scheme did not receive enough attention, so we witnessed a series of episodes more than a story told in dance. The thing that made it more or less clear was, therefore, the characterizations by the dancers themselves.

The drama unfolds through the arrival at a Christmas Eve party of the mysterious family friend, Drosselmeyer. After festivities, and bedtime, Clara (or in this case Maria) has dream sequences of the fight between the Mouse King and the Nutcracker Prince, and other things. Enough of the E.T.A. Hoffman original story was used to give the ballet a scenario, but much of action is given to dance solos and ensembles of a romantic and flamboyant character.

DUE TO THE temporary loss of two principal dancers, the cast in the printed program was changed around. (This probably had something to do with the late starting time.) This production featured three couples that carried all the major dance sequences, either in ensemble or solo, and mostly a deux. They were Sally Streets with Ron Thiele, Danna Cordova with Jim Voisine, and Johanna Breyer with Charles Wood. Streets and Thiele are fine dancers and Streets, in particular, displays excellent training and complete professionalism. She has marvelous timing and a highly polished technique. Voisine provided strong support for Danna Cordova, who was one of the finest dancers on stage. I would say that Cordova may have a great career if the fates are with her. What she added to the best of her colleagues was an impetuosity of expression and an impulsiveness of gesture that breathed generously within her tight sense of rhythm. And all of this so graceful.

Johanna Breyer is also a first-rate dancer and she too had strong and graceful support from her partner, Charles Wood. Breyer and Wood were very stylish and exotic in the Arabian dance, which was one of the nicest arrangements of the whole program.

Designs set for 'Madame Butterfly'

Architect Henry Hill launches boyhood dream on a stage platform

By AL EISNER

WHEN THE HOUSE lights dim and the orchestra begins to play the familiar overture to Puccini's Madame Butterfly next Friday, Jan. 6, at the Hidden Valley Theater, the audience will be seated around a set designed by Carmel architect Henry Hill.

It is a coup for the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble and the fulfillment of a lifelong dream for Hill. "I originally wanted to be a stage designer, but went to school during the Depression — the nearest thing was architecture," Hill said.

"I've always loved theater," Hill said. "Opera is the most extraordinarily civilized art form. It's a total experience using music, drama, theater, light."

Is it unusual for an architect to do stage design? "Too often," said Hill, "the architect is totally uninformed about art and music. He has no idea of the world he lives in." Hill recalled that the San Francisco Symphony was in deep financial trouble when he was practicing in the city. "I was in charge of raising money from architects. Lawyers gave 98 per cent of the funds to keep the orchestra alive. Architects gave 1 per cent."

While architecture and stage design might seem unrelated, there are basic similarities. "You have to provide for movement in space. With both you are dealing with problems of site, space, light, circulation and budget," Hill said.

His conviction was expressed early in his career as a teacher at Stanford University. "I wanted to stimulate young students of architecture by exposing them to opera. I'd pose the problem, for example, of how one

"OPERA IS THE most extraordinarily civilized art form," says architect Henry Hill. The Carmel resident has been engaged to do the stage design for the three operas comprising the 1978 season would express the essence of Otello with light and space."

Hill said he suggested that his students approach the answer through knowledge of the opera. "Why did the composer write it? What were the various stages of

for the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble. A former teacher of architecture at Stanford University, Hill recalls that he had his students build opera stage set models as a project to broaden their view of the world, development of the story?" His students had to build something physical — stage models — to express visual impressions.

For final criticism of the students' work, Hill invited well-known figures like Kurt Adler, director of the San Francisco Opera, and because stage design and architecture are so closely related. Both deal with problems of "site, space, light, circulation and budget," said Hill.

and Alfred Frankenstein and Alexander Fried, art critics of the San Francisco Chronicle and Examiner.

MADAMA BUTTERFLY HIDDEN VALLEY

"THE AUDIENCE will be physically and emotionally involved at every instant," says Carmel's Henry Hill, who did this stage design for the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble production of Madame Butterfly opening next Friday, Jan. 6, at the Hidden Valley Theater. Three levels are provided for the singers — an introductory level, the larger main level and a "high point" level, as seen above. A 20-by-50-foot polyurethane curtain, lighted from behind, will produce the feeling of what Hill describes as a "Japanese print."

"FACTORY ON WHEELS"

Pictured here is our remarkable new machine making continuous rain gutters on a job in Pebble Beach. It's the only machine of its kind on the entire Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing equipment can roll out seamless strips of gutter any length up to 980 feet! No seams mean better appearance, better draining, easier cleaning, no joint leakage.

What's more, the material is long-lasting aluminum which will not rust, with a fine protective coating of bonderized paint (like an enamel, applied under high pressure) both inside and out.

Expensive? Not at all! The cost for this extraordinary rain gutter is comparable to ordinary types of galvanized metal gutters which rust out in very few years.

So give us a call. Our skilled craftsmen will quickly and expertly produce and install this great new gutter right on the job for you. Remember... it's aluminum and will not rust.

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 5-3. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Here's a test to see whether you are taking any note of what I have written in previous weeks. We had a similar problem a while ago.

Black has a fair lead in the race, but White has an imposing home board. Therefore, Black must plan to bring his men into his home board as safely as possible.

The "obvious" way for Black to play his 5-3 is to bring home the two men from his 8-point—one to the 5-point and one to the 3-point. However, obvious and best are not synonyms, and this is another case where they are diametrically opposite in meaning.

If Black plays as above and should White roll a 6 and any number other than 5, he will be able to keep his board intact. Then, should Black be unlucky enough to roll 6-5 at his next turn, he will be forced to leave a blot on his bar-point, and that gives White a direct shot from the Black 1-point. Should White then succeed in hitting the Black blot, he will have turned defeat into victory.

The correct move for Black is to break his bar-point, bringing the men to his 4- and 2-points. True, if Black then rolls 4-1, 5-1 or 6-1 at his next turn, he will be forced to leave a blot, but that will leave only an indirect shot. White will have to roll specifically 6-1 to hit the blot, and that is 17 to 1 against.

Breaking the bar-point has another advantage. Should White roll a 6 at his next turn, he will have to run with a man from the Black 1-point. Not only does that weaken the White position, but it gives Black the chance to close his board by pointing on the blot on his 1-point. That should not only make sure of a win for Black, but it gives him an outside chance of winning a gammon, or double game.

Controversial restaurant law gets final reading on Tuesday

The only New Year's resolution the Carmel City Council has made for 1978 is to meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. in its chambers.

The City Council will meet at four-fifths strength, with Councilman Bernard Anderson away on vacation in Africa.

Anderson's absence may assure the adoption of a restrictive ordinance that would virtually eliminate the possibility of new restaurants' opening in Carmel.

The ordinance passed its first reading in December with Councilmen Anderson and David Hughes dissenting.

Under the ordinance, new restaurants or existing ones that expand would have to provide one parking space for every four seats they have.

If space is not provided, the owners would have to pay the $13,750 fee for each in-lieu space. A 60-seat dining room would need 15 parking spaces. The in-lieu fee would total $206,250.

City Attorney George Brehmer also will attempt to clarify to whom the ordinance applies. It is still unclear if restaurants not serving alcohol are affected by the ordinance.

The lawmakers also will consider continued assistance and consultation from their Salinas-based auditing firm, Haskins and Sells.

The firm completed an audit critical of the city's finance administration in November.

It already has billed the city $7,400 for services performed in 1977.

To follow up the recommendations the firm made to the City Council in November, the firm has proposed to file more reports, including one on how to improve the accounting procedures at Sunset Center. The added work would cost $5,000.

The city's garbage collection company has requested a rate increase from the City Council.

If the increase is approved as requested, the residential monthly rate of collection will jump from $3.25 per month to $4.50. The last increase was in January 1976.

The City Council also will hear the survey results from the proposed recreation facility poll issued last month.

The survey, mailed to 5,081 post office boxes in the city, indicates a slight edge of those responding in favor of such a facility.

Some 337 respondents favored the proposed $2.5 million recreation facility, while 304 said that they did not want it.

The City Council also will consider an ordinance that would expand the list of organizations authorized to conduct bingo games in the city. The request was made by the American Legion Post 512.

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

Let's not make this just another New Year's Eve. Taking a tip from bachelor friend Bob Peacock, who has lived in Carmel many years and loves it here, why not make a good old-fashioned oyster stew as he does. Instead of offering his guests "one for the road," this genial host sensibly pours from his heirloom tureen this:

Oyster Bar Stew

The easiest way to obtain small Olympia oysters in Carmel is to telephone Flaherty's Oyster Bar and place an order for fresh oysters. That is a must. Using a double boiler, Bob heats as much butter as he instinctively knows is needed, then adds oysters and cooks them only until edges curl. He then adds oyster liquor with half-and-half. Cook as briefly as possible, but make sure it's hot. Another thing that stamps this as a Peacock product is using only salt and freshly ground black pepper to accent this encouraging vitalizer.

Along with oyster stew, Bob serves ham de luxe. Using country hams, if possible, this gourmet chef uses canned peach juice as a basting agent plus dark brown sugar. It makes quite an ensemble.

Most of us want a hot biscuit in which to tuck a slice of ham, especially if we are going to tramp on the beach with our grandson. Ah well, that is expected.

We would like to add a special spoonbread to give to those two happy wanderers when they return.

Fly Away Spoonbread

Beat 2 egg yolks well. Add 1 cup sweet milk, a speck of salt and about a teaspoonful of baking soda. Then add 5 tablespoons white cornmeal more or less, mostly more. Now add 2 cups of buttermilk plus 2 tablespoons of melted butter. Lastly, fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a buttered baking dish for 45 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves six maybe.

For those who weary of the eggnog routine or find it too sweet, try London Fog. It is composed of equal parts of strong black coffee, bourbon and vanilla ice cream.

Beat until well mixed and serve in punch cups if you are in an elegant frame of mind, otherwise we use throwaway ones. The coffee removes cloying sweetness, the ice cream gives it body and it goes down so smoothly you enter into a fog sooner than expected. This unusual beverage was introduced to me by an Air Force major general. I serve it here with much success and no casualties so far.

For those who prefer a quickie Gin Fizz, here's the recipe:

Using half a glass of fresh lemon juice per person, add 2 glasses gin, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1/2 pint heavy cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Shake with crushed ice. Fill half a glass and add soda. This was given me by a vice admiral so we will toast both the Navy and the Air Force as the new year approaches.

We make other money green with envy.

If there's one thing all economists agree on it's this: Money is happiest when it's safe, and when it's growing.

Which are exactly the conditions we provide at Northern California Savings.

Deposits are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which keeps them safe. And they keep growing, because in addition to our Regular Savings, we have all of the high yield Certificate Accounts. It depends only on how much you wish to save, and for how long.

$20,000, in six years, can become $31,838.63 when held in a 7.75% annual rate account with daily compounded interest left to accumulate.*

So if your money isn't earning quite that much, and you suspect it isn't entirely happy where it is, you know what to do.

We'll make it positively ecstatic!

*Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for premature withdrawal from any certificate.

CARMEL HAS WILD PARTY

Carmel has had wild parties, boresome parties — parties very austere — and altogether some very original parties. Carmel's gregarious tendency become manifest last weekend at the Arts and Crafts costume dance.

There was a Russian Cossack, a French Zouave, a prime Dutch maiden, a beautiful colonial lady, the absent-minded professor, the girl in gingham, a Chinese herb doctor and Persian shjeks.

CARMEL'S QUALITY ENTERTAINMENT

We've been going over the records preparing a review of things dramatic, musical and entertaining in Carmel's 1927. It will run in some subsequent number, but we'll say now that if the population of Carmel were 25,000 people, the amount and quality of its entertainment would be astonishing.

Especially the quality. There is no question about it, Carmel is the best amateur dramatic or little theater town in the country.

CHOP CHOP CHOP

A special meeting of the City Council, with Mayor Jordan, Councilmen Larouette and Dennis, and Superintendent of Streets Fraser met Wednesday morning in front of the home of Miss Alice McChespey, to determine the fate of two trees.

MISSION STREET FEUD

The Mission Street improvement project has developed into a full-fledged feud with some of the property owners wanting it, some not wanting it and six stalwart fighters not wanting it unless — the unless is a corker — unless all the trees in the gutter are removed and the curb is run in a straight line between Sixth and Fourth on both sides of the street.

CITY'S FREE TREE BUSINESS BOOMING

Carmel people are taking advantage of the city's offer to plant trees along streets in the neighborhood of their homes.

Commissioner Francis Whitaker reports that the street department has put out 75 oak trees in response to citizen requests.

ROOMING HOUSE MUST GO

Superior Judge George P. Jorgenson upheld the Carmel zoning ordinance Tuesday when he ruled against James and Stamatia Gregorian, who had filed in Superior Court for a declaratory judgment on Locksley Hall, 13th Street between Carmelo and San Antonio.

The Gregorians, who had made extensive alterations to accommodate 10 guests at Locksley Hall, claimed that the right to take 10 guests had never been discontinued, that ordinance passed in 1940 was not a reasonable and valid zoning ordinance, and that its enforcement would place undue hardship on them.

LOCAL MAIL GOES TO 6 CENTS

New first class postal rates will zoom to six cents Monday, according to Carmel Postmaster Fred Strong. Postcards will climb to five cents and air mail letters will rise to 10 cents, he said.

CARMEL IS GOING TO THE DOGS

The Pine Cone recently received a letter from an irate visitor complaining that Carmel is going to the dogs.

This doesn't imply, however, that our unique little village is going "to pot," but it does mean that the residents are permitting their dogs, small or large, to use our public streets and sidewalks as relief stations, to put it delicately.

NARCOTICS AGREEMENT

Because of the increasing narcotics problem on the Peninsula, the City Council is considering a joint powers agreement for mutual aid and cooperation in narcotics control on the Peninsula.

At last week's City Council meeting, Police Chief Clyde Klauman said that when an officer helps out an adjoining community, he is without insurance if injury should result.

Mrs. Steilberg dead at 81

Elizabeth Van Everen Steilberg, of Berkeley, active in psychiatric service in the San Francisco Bay Area for 40 years and widow of the renowned architect Walter T. Steilberg, died at her home Dec. 8. She was 81.

The Steilbergs lived much of their later years at their Carmel vacation residence on Torres near Eighth. Mrs. Steilberg's mother, Mary Van Everen Ferguson, lived here for nearly 20 years.

Born April 17, 1896, in Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Steilberg held AB and MS degrees from UC Berkeley and an MSW from Smith College in Northampton, Mass.

Initially a botanist, she coauthored several scientific works with the late Willis Lynn Jepson, early authority on West Coast flora. In the 1920s, Mrs. Steilberg changed her field to psychology and psychiatry and was a staff member of the Institute of Child Welfare at UC Berkeley. In subsequent years, she held supervisory positions in psychiatric social work for the Alameda County Welfare Department, Travelers Aid and Family Service Association.

She worked early in World War II in the American Friends Service Committee's organization to alleviate the hardships of relocated Japanese-Americans. Later in the war, she served as psychiatric social worker for the American Red Cross at Oak Knoll Naval Hospital in Oakland and at Veterans' Hospitals elsewhere on the Pacific Coast.

Put these tips and some spare fuses near your fuse box.

With a flashlight, they may help should your lights go out.

Be Prepared. Know where your fuse boxes or circuit breakers are located. Locate the main switch box—usually near the spot where the PG&E electric service wires connect to your house, or near your PG&E electric meter. Locate any additional fuse box or boxes—usually in a closet or utility room. Keep spare fuses handy.

Check the Neighbors. If your lights should go out, check to see if other homes in your neighborhood have lights. If the power is off in your home only, you may have a blown fuse or tripped circuit breaker.

Determine the Cause. Blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers are often caused by having too many lamps or appliances connected to one outlet or circuit. Another possibility is a defective cord on a lamp or appliance. To check, unplug all lamps or appliances on the affected circuit, looking for defective plugs or cords while doing so. Replace the blown fuse or reset the tripped circuit breaker, following the procedures given below. Then plug each lamp or appliance back in one at a time. A defective one or an overload will cause the fuse to blow, or circuit breaker to trip, again.

To Replace a Fuse. First turn the main switch to "OFF." Make sure that your hands are dry and that you are standing on a dry surface. Look for the "blown" fuse; the "window" may be blackened, or there may be a visible gap in the fuse element. Replace the blown fuse with one of the proper amperage rating, usually one of not more than 30 amps. Never use a penny or other metal object to "bridge" the blown fuse, as this could cause a house fire. Turn the main switch to "ON." If only part of the lights in the house come on, this may indicate that a circuit breaker has tripped, or a fuse in a branch fuse box has also blown. Check these fuses in the same way you did at the main switch. Branch box fuses have a maximum rating of 15 or 20 amps.

Cartridge Fuses. Be sure the main switch is "OFF" while you are changing cartridge fuses. You won't be able to visually tell exactly which cartridge fuse is blown. In this case, test by safely replacing each fuse with a new one until you find the blown fuse. Generally it's a good idea to replace all cartridge fuses in a circuit when one blows.

To Reset a Circuit Breaker. A tripped circuit breaker will probably be out of the "ON" position. Move the affected circuit breaker handle all the way to the "OFF" position (for some circuit breakers, a moderate pressure in the "OFF" direction is necessary to cause them to reset). Then, move the handle to the "ON" position. If the affected circuit breaker does not indicate that it has tripped (its handle has not moved from "ON" position), and you do not know which circuit breaker controls the affected circuit, try resetting all circuit breakers.

Some Added Safety Tips. Never plug in electrical appliances near bathtubs or basins. Never wash coffee pots or frying pans while they are still plugged in. Make sure that electric tools are properly grounded (with a 3-prong plug), or are of the U.L. approved "double-insulated" type. When you unplug an appliance, pull the plug—not the cord.

Still in the Dark? If you've followed all of these procedures and you're still in the dark, don't hesitate to call PG&E. We'll be happy to help.

Stage designer

Butterfly and how will he express this in his design?

Hill explained: "The opera is a poignant tragedy. The basic irony of the American sailor treating Butterfly like a toy with no idea of what he was doing. It's basically very simple and that is why people respond to it so much.

"I'm giving them a performing platform that has the feeling of a Japanese print. The background will not impose itself on what the singers are doing or on what the audience is receiving.

"Everything will be reduced to its simplicities. There will be an impression of the house. All sorts of shadows will be created by light — the shadows of cherry blossoms, for instance. The action will move from pools of light, constantly changing pools of light. It will never be intense, because the audience is not looking at a stage.

"They must be physically and emotionally involved at every instant. We have to aid and abet the director to help the audience let its imagination go. The garden floor becomes the house floor. A lot of things can be done with color and light. If we have a lot of shoji screens then what is left for the audience to do?"

Light will play an important part in the design of act three — the final scenes of the tragedy. The American sailor, Pinkerton, returns with his ship and Butterfly eagerly anticipates his return. "The warmth of her expectation will be done with light, the coldness of the dawn will be expressed with light," Hill continued.

"Cherry blossom boughs will convey the feeling of spring. Act one takes place in spring and act three is in the spring, three years later."

During the love duet, genuine flower petals will fall on the lovers from above. "We felt strongly that flowers should be used. The audience is too close to use confetti and we've got to be careful. Dropping things from an overhead catwalk can be distracting."

HILL SAID his design will stand or fall on the success of a 50-by-20-foot polyurethane curtain that will be lighted from behind.

"We'll convey the feeling of mist and of the Bay of Nagasaki with changing light. Instead of a painted mountain we are going to use a hanging mountain made of bamboo.

"It would be a lot easier for me to get ideas for the set design by copying pictures of Japanese houses and scenes from books. We have to tread very carefully to give the audience what it expects out of Madame Butterfly."

Hill is keenly aware of the physical problems of the Hidden Valley theater, but he regards them as stimulating challenges. "The 45-piece orchestra and the chorus consume a huge amount of space," he said. It is space that could be occupied by the stage or by precious seating capacity.

How does Hill feel about his assignment? "I'm excited about working with all those talented young people. They have the intensity of devotion to what they believe in."

And so, too, does Henry Hill.

About Henry Hill

Born in England of American parents, Carmel architect Henry Hill studied for a year at the University of London, was awarded a BA from UC Berkeley and his master's degree in architecture from Harvard University.

He opened his own office in San Francisco in 1946 and has lived in what he laughingly describes as "semi-retirement" in Carmel since 1970.

Among the 500 structures bearing the Henry Hill imprint are the U.S. Embassy housing building in Vienna; a palace in San Salvador; the Longshoreman's building at Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco (which features a copper dome and the largest single span ever done in reinforced concrete); and a chapel in Moline, Ill., commissioned by the owner of the John Deere Tractor Company and given to a public hospital. About 25 other buildings, mostly residential, were designed by Hill in the Monterey Peninsula area. He also worked in Quebec, Hawaii and on the East Coast.

Hill was a member of the American Institute of Architects, but quit "after a policy row."

He taught architecture regularly at Stanford University for 19 years, and at Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo. He also lectured at Cornell University, the University of British Columbia and at colleges in Utah, Kansas and elsewhere.

Hill served as a member of the Carmel Planning Commission for two years. His term expired two years ago.

He and his wife of 30 years, Heather, have two children. Daughter Vicki works with her husband, Gary Koepfel, at the Coast Gallery in Big Sur. Their other daughter, Jane, "does everything" at the Carmel Rancho office of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith.
